E. Committees, Liaisons, and Case Reports

1. Neutral Observers – Shulman

Shulman reported some communications with Supervisor John Woolley. Essentially, two directions are proposed by Woolley: forming a temporary, ad hoc group of neutral observers to deal with the current problems on PALCO land, and the Commission working with the County Supervisors for a long-term solution.

Miller reported on a meeting on 6 December at which he and Shoffner represented the Commission in discussions with Bonnie Blackberry and Roger Zos (ACLU), the County Sheriff's department, John Campbell and an attorney for PALCO. The issue addressed was the potential for violence at the demonstration sites and a discussion of whether permission should be given for neutral observers to be present at the demonstrations on PALCO land. PALCO did not appear supportive of having neutral observers on their land but is taking the issue under advisement.

Shulman summarized recent events, including concern of the County Counsel for possible lack of sovereign immunity and Senator Chesbro's consideration of possible legislation to expand the scope of human rights issues formally covered by state law. He then presented the four options proposed by Supervisor Woolley for the Commission to consider:

Option 1: Have the Human Rights Commission develop the responsibilities, protocols, training and deployment of the Neutral Observer Program. The County provides liability insurance

Option 2: The Commission develops for the first time only, the protocols, identifies and trains observers, and organizes the deployment of observers with the Sheriff. The observers, however, are then contracted to the County as individuals and not as Commission members and are then disassociated with the Commission. The county would provide liability insurance.

Option 3: Request legislative support for changes to the state statute defining the breadth of the scope of activities assigned to the Commission. (This already is being done)

Option 4: Create by County ordinance a county-recognized human rights committee that would include a neutral observer program.

After considerable discussion, Keele moved (Shaffer seconded) that Option 1 be recommended by the Commission. The measure passed and Shulman will inform Supervisor Woolley of our position.
